With Gratitude: A Message from the Board Chair & Executive Director

Over the course of the last 12 months, you, with thousands of others, have played a pivotal role in defending Adirondack wilderness, clean water and air, and our vibrant communities. By responding to a call to action, volunteering on behalf of the Park, or donating to the Adirondack Council, you took a vital step in preserving the Adirondacks as a national treasure. Without your support, the efforts highlighted on the pages that follow wouldn't be possible. Thank you for investing in the Adirondack Council's work and believing in a bright future for the Adirondacks.

The Adirondacks face unique challenges as the region enters a period of great change. While the Park is stressed and challenged at this point in time, there is reason to be optimistic given all we've achieved and the many opportunities ahead.

With your support, we've been able to fight for clean water and clean air as we combat issues like climate change and invasive species that threaten our landscape. Opportunities for green jobs are being created through founding the Timbuctoo Summer Climate and Careers Institute that will bring the next generation of diverse students to the Park. New state funding will support the development of a Visitor Use Management Plan that will outline a recreation and stewardship plan that will protect the resources of the Adirondacks and the opportunity to experience wilderness in the Park. And as we continue to build upon this work, the Council's VISION 2050 plan, published last November, will continue to inform and guide our decisions for decades to come.

We have many accomplishments to celebrate from the last year, but the need for Adirondack Park advocates is persistent if we are to successfully foster conservation and positive change in the region through measures like securing funding for the best available science and policy and expanding equitable access to the Forest Preserve for all. Together, we look forward to working hand in hand with you to shape the future of the Adirondacks.

Thank you for choosing to support the Adirondack Council and for being part of the larger community of stewards striving to protect the water, air and wildlands of the Adirondacks for generations to come.

With much gratitude,

THANK YOU

Thank You to Our Members!

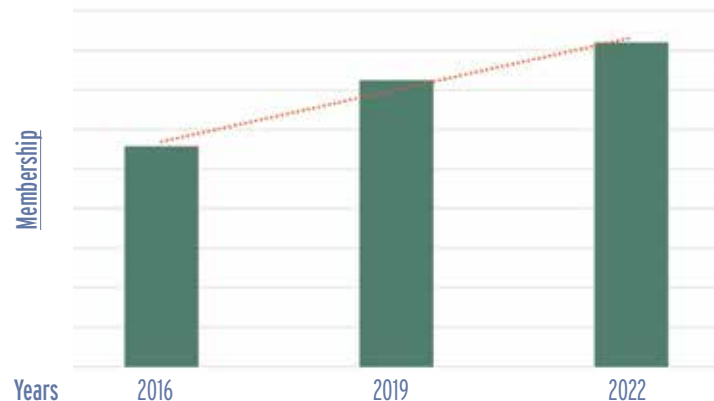

The Staff and Board of Directors extend our sincere gratitude to everyone who supported the Council with contributions of time and funding this year. With thousands of membership level contributors, we apologize that we cannot list everyone – at least not with large enough type to represent the gratitude we feel for your support. Whether you gave a membership contribution at the $18 to $249 level, became a sustaining member, or purchased a new Council mug, your support provided the Council with the financial resources to do conservation and advocacy work for the Adirondacks every day. We appreciate your support and hope you take personal pride in the Council's many accomplishments for the Adirondacks that you help make possible. Thank you!

ACTION

Notable Accomplishments

Science and Climate

The Adirondack Council, after leading efforts to address acid rain, is now spearheading advocacy for federal and state actions to combat climate change impacts in the Adirondacks, and secure critical Park science, research and monitoring investments. Federal infrastructure and climate actions have been historic. New York is leading with legislation, funding and a draft climate action plan. Earlier this year the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), with a budget reduced by the previous administration, closed multiple air monitoring stations in the Park. A Council lead coalition helped Senator Schumer secure funding so they could reopen. The Council also led a coalition that secured $500,000 to jump start a three-year $6 million dollar Survey of Climate and Adirondack Lake Ecosystems (SCALE).

“Places like the North Country are primed to reap the rewards, lowering electric bills for families, creating good-paying manufacturing and clean energy jobs to help secure America energy independence, all while preserving the natural beauty of the Adirondacks for our children and grandchildren.”

– US Senate Majority Leader Charles E. Schumer | Remarks on the Inflation Reduction Act and the largest investment in fighting climate change

Wilderness, Overuse and Equitable Access

For over five years New York State and key partners studied the overuse problem, tested ideas and finalized a report written with assistance from the Council. This year, the State expanded funding to $8.6 million and implemented more recommendations to address wilderness overuse, education, stewards, sustainable trails, improved trailheads and access, a small pilot permit system and funds dedicated for third party visitor use management expertise. The Council also secured State action to start a new Forest Ranger academy and the hiring of more assistant forest rangers, in addition to increased funding for the Adirondack Diversity Initiative and Visitor Interpretive Centers in Newcomb and Paul Smiths.

Jobs and Broadband

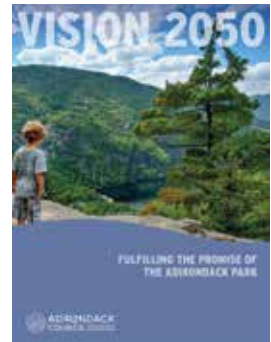

In response to community requests, the Council helped secure over $1 billion in funding for and expanded availability of broadband and helped eliminate the utility fee barrier to last-mile connections, to expand connectivity and support park jobs. The Council's Forever Adirondacks Campaign successfully advocated for a new $2.1 million Timbuctoo Climate and Careers Institute for City University of New York students and others with the SUNY College of Environmental Science and Forestry in Newcomb. The Institute will be a new jobs pipeline and foster more diverse vibrant Park communities.

VISION 2050 - Fulfilling the Promise of the Adirondack Park

The Adirondack Council released the publication Adirondack VISION 2050, a long-range vision for the Park. The report was informed by three years of input from over 100 local, regional and national stakeholders and scientists. It responds to threats and opportunities with 250 recommendations to preserve ecology, sustain communities and improve park management.

Promoting Clean Water, Clean Air, and Green Jobs

The Adirondack Council advocated for a Clean Water, Clean Air and Green Jobs Bond Act. Governor Hochul and the Legislature approved a $4.2 Billion proposal for capital projects that curb greenhouse gasses and combat climate change. Wilderness protection, green energy, and energy conservation benefit the Park's ecology, economy and public health. The Bond Act goes to New York voters in November.

Supporting Adirondack Farms

The Adirondack Council Essex Farm Institute program awarded 15 micro-grants totaling $32,000 to local farmers and value-added food producers in an effort to help build a climate-friendly local economy in the Adirondack Park. It was the seventh consecutive year that the Adirondack Council has sponsored this project, with thanks to the Klipper family's founding and continued investment. This year, grant criteria were modified to accommodate both larger operations as well as projects featuring collaborations between several qualified applicants.

Preserving Clean Water

Seven Park communities, including Peru and Ticonderoga, received clean water grants of over $28 million. Over the course of five years, the NYS Clean Water State Revolving Fund, which the Adirondack Council helped secure creation of, has awarded $88 million to Park communities to keep pollution out of Adirondack waters. The Council secured a state addition of $500 million to the Fund this year.

Building Diverse Support for the Adirondacks

The Adirondack Council hosted the Black, Puerto Rican, Hispanic & Asian State Legislative Caucus in the Adirondacks. The Caucus members experienced the Park, learned about its history with the abolitionist and suffrage movements, and conservation. The Caucus adopted an agenda including Park needs, needs of BIPOC and other communities, and environmental justice.

"I have been able to travel all of North America and several countries of the world. Yet, as lovely as those places are, for me, none of them compare with the Adirondacks. A good portion of my heart is devoted to the lakes, trees and mountains inside the Blue Line. I am proud to support the Adirondack Council.

IN MEMORIAM

Timothy Lincoln Barnett (1940-2022)

Tim Barnett was a nature-lover working for a television advertising department in the New York metro area during the 1970s. Because of family ties to Camp Dudley, Tim settled in Westport and eagerly accepted a job establishing what would become the Adirondack Chapter of The Nature Conservancy. By 1975, Tim was recognized as a conservation leader and was asked to join the board of a new advocacy organization called the Adirondack Council. The first meetings of the Council board of directors were comprised of representatives of organizations as large as the Sierra Club and Natural Resources Defense Council, and as small as the Hawkeye Conservationists, of Silver Lake, in Clinton County.

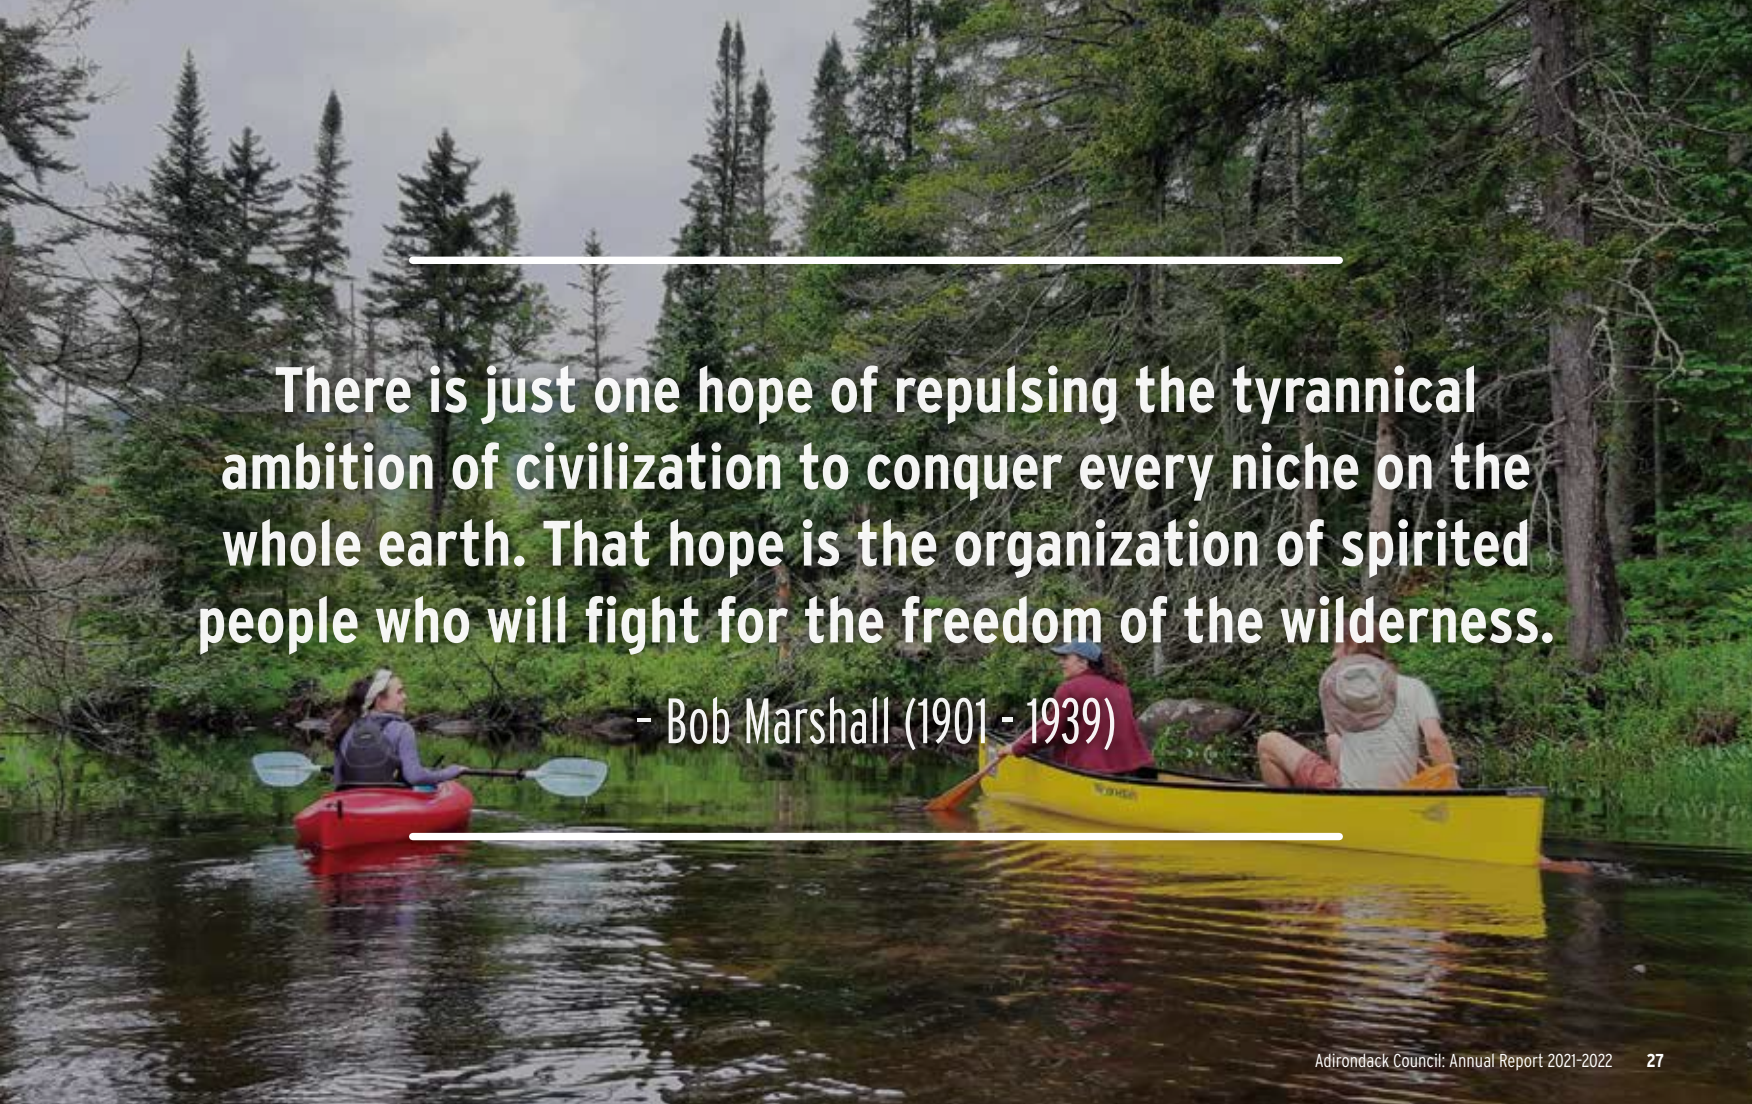

As the two organizations grew, they shared office space on Church Street (now Hand Avenue) in Elizabethtown. By the mid-1990s, both organizations had outgrown that space. Tim built a new building for his staff in Keene, while the Council expanded its office footprint and opened a new office in Albany. That allowed the two organizations to remain close enough to communicate regularly, but not get into one another's way. The Conservancy could avoid the controversies of pressing hard for political action, which might upset private landowners and forestall protection agreements. The Council was free to seek political change without interfering with important land purchases.

Best of all, Tim's long career allowed him to be an advisor and mentor to two generations of environmental leaders, both in the land trust and advocacy fields. His intelligence, kindness, sense of humor and unwavering commitment to the Adirondacks will not be forgotten.

A photograph of three people canoeing on a calm river. The person in the foreground is in a red kayak, wearing a purple long-sleeved shirt and a white headband. The person in the middle is in a yellow kayak, wearing a red shirt and a blue cap. The person in the back is also in a yellow kayak, wearing a white shirt and a wide-brimmed hat. They are surrounded by a dense forest of tall evergreen trees. The water is dark and reflects the surrounding greenery. A white horizontal line is positioned above the text, and another is below the attribution.

There is just one hope of repulsing the tyrannical ambition of civilization to conquer every niche on the whole earth. That hope is the organization of spirited people who will fight for the freedom of the wilderness.
